

Visit to Durham Cathedral on February 8, 2017

We arrived in Durham at 10:50 am, some of us decided to walk up to the Cathedral and others took one of the shuttle busses. We had an extremely interesting tour by two very knowledgeable and amusing tour guides who gave us all the history of the Cathedral from when it was first built in its current form in the 11th Century to modern times.

We had lunch in one of the rooms of the Cathedral followed by a visit to the open treasure exhibition which was housed in the newly refurbished monk's dormitory, and Cathedral kitchen which is one of only two remaining intact kitchens in Europe. Despite the cold weather we had a very enjoyable day.

Many thanks to Carol for the Article and to Janet and Mike for the Photos.
